

architects in schools

Share your passion, professional knowledge and skills with students eager to learn through the architecture foundation of oregon's architects in schools (ais) program.

architects in schools matches professional architects with 3rd, 4th and 5th grade teachers for a 6-week free classroom residency (approximately 1-2 hours a week per class). Students participating in architects in schools learn important skills through lessons that include cooperation and planning, connect to the Oregon State Standards and help them gain a better sense of how school relates to the 'real world.'

architects in schools has been inspiring children to examine their built environment for three decades. Architects and designers volunteer their time because sharing their passion for architecture with students energizes them. Teachers tell us that ais has a tremendous impact on their students. We invite you to join us for an exhilarating foray into the built environment with your students.

Please see attached information and application for more details.
Application deadline is Friday, October 28, 2011.

architects in schools 2011-2012

We will:

1. Pair you with one or more third through fifth grade classroom teachers in your geographic area.
2. Guide you through a training program with experienced ais volunteers.
3. Give you a 360-page curriculum guide from which to build lesson plans with your teacher partner(s). Architects may receive Continuing Education credit or IDP credits for completion of the entire program.
4. Provide ongoing support from afo's staff and education committee members.
5. Facilitate AIA Continuing Education Community Service credits.

We ask you to:

1. Commit approximately 20 hours between January and May 2012.
 - 12 hours in the classroom (approximately two hours per week over a six-week period that works with the architect's schedule)
 - 8 hours of orientation, including pre-planning time with teachers, and hours of "floating time"
2. Work with your teacher-partner(s) to plan your residency goals, lessons and schedule.
3. Visit the classroom(s) approximately two hours per week over a six-week period.
4. Support students' creation of a project for exhibit at the end of the residency.

We expect you will:

1. Be renewed, energized and rewarded by this experience!

Program Timeline:

- October – Applications submitted to afo
- December – Applicants notified about participation
- January/February – Teacher/Architect Orientations
- February through April/May – Residencies take place in area classrooms
- May and June – Exhibits of students' work

Orientations:

Portland: Saturday, January 28, 2012

Bend: Saturday, February 4, 2012

Salem/Eugene: TBA

Architect application submissions must be received or postmarked no later than Friday, October 28, 2011. For more information, contact Kim Ruthardt Knowles, 503/317.7537 or kim_ais@msn.com.
